Mere Mention.

We have received a handsome announcement of the school of English Speech, History, Literature, Shakespeare Study, and Voice Culture, at Worcester, Mass., at which Mrs. Geo. M. Woodford, daughter of David A. Wise of this city, is a director and instructor.

The first quarterly meeting will be held at the M. E. Church, next Sunday, Love-feast in the Chapel at 9:30 in the morning, and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at the regular morning Service. Rev. J. L. Hudson, Presiding Elder, will preach in the evening.

Attention is called to the advertisement of S. H. Dodge in another column. Mr. D. has recently purchased a complete set of trial lenses. Eugene Dodge, who received a diploma from the celebrated Prof. King, of Cleveland, will have charge of the optical department.

Mr. Lewis J. Merritt of Greenwich, Conn. and Miss Emma Otto of Ypsilanti, Mich. were united in Matrimony, Oct. 28, 1888, Rev. J. Venning officiating. The happy couple left for the East on the evening train.

A bag of beans was distributed along Congress street, yesterday, very much to the discomfort of the owner, who was seen with broom and dust pan, in hurried efforts to gather them up. He is not supposed to be the same man who, a long time ago, "scattered precious seed by the wayside" but possibly a descendant.

Mary E. Murna of Flint, Asst. Deputy Inspector, will inspect Carpenter Relief Corps of this city on Friday afternoon, Nov. 2. Every member is requested to be present.

"Practical Jokes"—a sermon on the customs of Halloween," is Rev. W. T. Beal's subject at the Congregational church next Sunday evening. Morning subject, "Cross and Crown." Seats are free and all are welcome.

A social hop at the Ypsilanti House, Friday evening, Nov. 2, 1888. Friends of the house are invited. T. M. Holland, Proprietor.

The Suppho Club meets next Wednesday evening with Prof. D. Putnam, Forest ave., Subject, Verdi.

The Y. W. C. A. services will be continued in the Methodist chapel during the month of November.

The Y. W. C. A. Bible training class will meet with Miss Kittie Dennis, 1st door in Cady Block, Monday evening, Nov. 5th at 7:30 o'clock.

Personal.

Married, at the home of the brides' father, on the 31st inst., by Dr. McCorkle, Mr. L. Loring Brooks, of Boston, to Miss Kate Glover, of this city. An interesting incident connected with this marriage was the fact that Dr. McCorkle was favored with the assistance of Dr. Smith, of Newton Centre, Mass., who married the parents of the groom and who has the distinction of having written our national hymn, "My country 'tis of thee." The presents were numerous, rich, and beautiful.

Tully Woodruff made a flying trip to Ypsilanti, Saturday night. Tully is not heeding the words of Ezekiel 5:1.

Mrs. C. Stowe has gone to Grand Rapids to remain until after the holidays with her niece.

Mr. Chas. Roe, the well known stock dealer of Detroit, is being treated at the Sanitarium for an acute attack of inflammatory rheumatism. His many friends throughout the state will be gratified to hear of his speedy recovery.

Miss May Geer of Northville is visiting Miss Grace Loomis.

Senator Palmer and Mr. Livingston, while in the city were the guests of Captain and Mrs. Allen.

Miss Scotney of Detroit, attended the wedding of her sister, Miss Mattie Scotney of Superior, and Mr. Lamphere, which occurred last Wednesday.

T. L. Evans of Williamston was in town Saturday. Mr. Evans was the Normal's favorite orator while in school, and is now teaching his second year as principal at Williamston. He reports Ingham county as wide awake this fall with enthusiasm for the Republican ticket.

Mr. Thomas Phillips spent some days in Northville last week.

Miss Annie Murby of Detroit is visiting Ypsilanti friends.

Miss Allie Densmore is visiting relatives and friends at Greenville and Mason. In the hurry of ante-election days we omitted to mention last week the recent marriage of Mr. Mark F. Finley, of Washington, to Miss Belle McKnew, of the Capital City. The fortunate gentleman is the son of our esteemed friends, Mr. and Mrs. Florus S. Finley, of this city.

Walter F. Henschel, who has been residing for some time at Old Orchard Beach, Me., will reach here to-morrow to spend a few days among old friends.

Elmer S. Gardner has changed his address from Chicago to Belvidere, Ill. Mrs. Ellen J. Whitman, mother of Mrs. Gardner, accompanies them.

Chester L. Sterling of East Saginaw, a well-known Ypsilanti boy, was married Oct. 16, to Miss Helen Evetta Nye, of East Saginaw. The young couple came here to visit Mr. Sterling's mother, Mrs. C. Y. Sterling, with whom the bride is for the present making her home.

Fred Preston of Cleary's Business College, has finished his course and returned to his home in Monroe.

Geo. Alexander is now in the employ of the Am. Ex. Co. at Cleveland as receiving clerk in their main office.

The administration may get Lord Sackville-West recalled, but that will not get the cat back into the bag.

An Arctic Trip.

The Normal Lecture Course was opened Monday evening most successfully, with Lieut. Schwatka's thrillingly interesting recital of the history of his memorable expedition in search of the remains of the Sir John Franklin expedition eleven or twelve years ago. A splendid audience greeted him, well filling the large Normal Hall, which in its rearrangement and re-seating with comfortable opera chairs was new to many of the people. The lecture was a recital of incident, rather than a description of the region and its characteristics, but was for that reason, perhaps, the better adapted for a popular lecture

The Girl With Black Eyes.

Three days and three nights has her picture like a calico clad apparition all this time before our thoughts haunted us and distilled pain into the jar which the heart appears to always have open to catch the drops as they fall.

Sitting beside Superintendent Blake, who these many years, in the general office of the commissioners of correction of New York city has had thousands of heart-broken evidences of man's inhumanity to man, the faithful expect to pass in review before St. Peter. I saw the young, the middle-aged, the stout, the blind, lame, bruised and ragged pass along in line, stop before his desk and briefly tell him their errands and ask his advice.

That was four days ago. Of his official duties and the faithful, heartsome way they are performed, another time will do.

Among those who come, all to many with tear-wet faces, was one girl not yet seventeen years old. Her hair was brown, long and silken. Her face was well favored, and her voice was that of a sweet, lovable disposition girl. Her eyes were as brown as her hair. She left the home of her Cornish parents in a mining town not far from Scranton, not two years ago, to prove the worth or wickedness of a gambler who lured her so far from her widowed mother and the good way that she dare not return.

She stood before the desk, which is a high one, so that her head and eyes were above it. Her face was bruised, her nose was broken, and her eyes were so blackened about that one would think a horse had kicked her, or that she had been struck with a ball or a club. Invited to come inside behind the railing, and thence into a small room whose walls have been kalsomined thousands of times with the sighs and sobs of the wronged and ruined, this girl with the black eyes told her story.

Near Scranton, in her home, she was poor as are so many of the children of underpaid laboring men and their overworked, half starved wives. Her father died, and her mother went dazed with grief as she looked through her own eyes and the eyes of her four children into the future, trying in vain to see a glimmer of light beyond.

What could she, a pretty girl of fifteen, do to help? A well dressed man came to her mother's home to offer to find a good place for the girl if she could be spared.

He was a stranger, but he told of people whom the mother knew. He offered to obtain an excellent position for Leah, as she is known, in New York, and to defray her expenses to the home of his friends in New York, who had asked him to select for his family help some good girl from the country. She came with him to a house in the upper part of the city, was received as one of the family, but was surprised to find here three other girls, stated as relatives on a visit. She worked and waited on the household for a month, and one Sunday was sleepy, so sleepy. The beer given her to drink had been drugged. Monday when she fully awoke, she knew that it were better for her to have remained with her mother, or to have passed on to spirit life with her father, who was a man who dearly loved his children.

Then it was the whole of the horrid, but common and continually played plot came to her, and she wept as her heart-broken mother had wept, when went her father to his house in the beyond, but tears could not give strength or courage.

She did not and does not know who did her the wrong of bringing her here or the other wrong. She was declared in debt to the household for her education to city life, and commended to remain till in a way proposed she could cancel the debt. Vainly she prayed, pleaded and wept. Those who were powerless and receive no help from those they call upon, must do as they are forced to do.

One day a man of gilded dress and fluent speech made a proposition that seemed to offer better than the life that she was forced into, and she went to live with him in a suite of rooms over his saloon in a disreputable part of the city. When sober he was coarse but not ugly, when drunk he was brutal, but that is common with brutal men, as their victims can testify.

Worse and worse. He tired of his toy, beautiful, obedient and hopeful as it was. The little money given her she had sent to her mother, reporting that she had a situation, but could not come to see her, so that now she was penniless.

Five days ago, the brute who was boss and monarch, and mighty with a big political influence beat her unmercifully with his brawny fists. Three times had he knocked her senseless to the floor. Then he had kicked her on the body and in the face. Then he had ordered her out of the house, charging her with stealing $1 from his pocket. He forced her into the street at daylight. He kept all of her clothes save the nightdress, the hose and shoes, the calico wrap and the old bonnet she had on. And in less than a month she was to become a mother.

I have stood by the hour looking at Niagara taking its leap and hearing its roar, but in a day the sound would pass away. But the picture and the recital of the poor child, as such she is, indeed, will not pass away. It remains and it pains, even if it does not those who ruin and who protect those who ruin.

"What can be done for her?"

"We can keep her here for a brief time, provide her with the food she needs, and send an officer to bring the man here to be interviewed."

"Then what?"

"The girl is in no condition to go into court to make a charge. Perhaps he can be induced to make reparation. To provide something for her future and the double of needs it will bring. She has no money to put up for her. No money to pay a legal shark who devours all he touches. Till the result be known he cannot be compelled to support any one, and it may be he is but a housed vampire with nothing but a pull. But all will be done that can be done to help the sufferer."

island to wait in agony and then to suffer in body. They tell of the oasis of the desert. If there are any oases in heaven, where the trees are extra laden with fruit, and the grass extra dotted with flowers, and the angels extra kind, I hope it will be for the ones who on earth come in contact with its villains and are thus wronged.

Every act that man does insures a reward, or stands Over There on the records, till fully atoned for.

To-night I have been thinking of man's duty to his fellow man, and how very few there are who try to do it well or even at all. Have been thinking of the poor laboring men here and there, and of the usurers, tempters and absorbers who war upon them and theirs, and who devour them continually. Of the hundreds who are sold, and spend, and spend in drink and dissipation, and who go deeper and deeper into poverty, till they leave their wives and children as prey to the vultures that swoop down from on high to whet appetites and gratify avarice on the needy but deserving.

What blessings would follow the husbanding of earnings, the having of something to keep all wolves from the door, and thus to hold the family together till each is cared for, not by strangers who come from afar, but by those who have proven their worth and disposition. More roads lead to the great cities than therefrom. More enter than leave. The candle is beautiful to the moth, as the heat from a charcoal stove is grateful to those who may be cold, but who soon sleep to waken no more.

Into the country villages and small cities go those from the large city, all too often with evil intent. They drop in to the taverns, saloons and stores where idlers and gamblers are suffered to sit and tell all they know. In these places the local history of men, women and children are given. The faults and wickedness of the father are given. The character of the mother and the peculiarities of the children are talked over and over, so that at one of the places a stranger can learn where to find anything from a fat cow to a girl to be lured away and ruined. The rest is easy, and very easy if unkindness has grown to a place in a family, or the protector thereof has left the jewels in poverty square for all the jewel hunting crowd to find. Let death enter the family as often as it will, as a messenger of peace calling us to the land of rest, but pray heaven that no tempter may come to the homes of any who read this true story of the ruin of one poor girl lured into the world, there to be worse than murdered.

FACTS ABOUT FURNACES.

Charles Wingate, on the Effects of Furnace Heat Upon Health.

In February, 1881, the Committee of Hygiene of the Medical Society of Kings County rendered a report, which is published in full in the proceedings of that society, upon catarrh and whether that disease was aggravated by residences in cities. The opinions of a large number of physicians of long experience were obtained and their testimony showed "that though climatic and city influences have much to do with the creation of catarrh, yet defective heating, lighting, airing, sunning, and drainage of houses, with improper views as to air, clothing, bathing and exercise are the main causes."

Furnace heat per se is not so unwholesome, but it is the absence of ventilation which makes it so. If a furnace is of sufficient size to warm a building without

OPENING EVERY DRAFT, and heating the fire pot red hot, and if the fresh air supply is taken from a proper source and not from a damp area or unclean cellar, and, furthermore, if there are sufficient openings at the top of the house to allow the impure air which rises to that point to escape and thus cause a constant circulation of sufficiently warmed but not overheated air through the house; under these conditions a furnace is unobjectionable.

Furnaces are often badly located. It is easier to force warm air through a furnace flue fifty feet away from the prevalent wind than ten feet in the opposite direction. Hence the furnace should be placed near the northern side of the building or two should be provided.

Hot-air flues should not be carried for any distance through cold cellars, halls, or basements, as they will become chilled and will not draw without being cased as mineral wool.

DON'T SET A FURNACE IN A PIT, especially in a wet soil, where water will collect after every rain storm, but stand it on brick arches so as to raise it above the ground; also cement the pit. It is unfortunately very common to find such depressions filled with water, this causes rusting of the furnace itself and damp in the cellar. In very many houses occupied by persons of means the furnaces are no longer used but have been replaced by open fires. This is costly comfort, but it is a commendable plan, as it furnishes ample ventilation to the living rooms. It is desirable that one room should at least be thus supplied with a cheerful and sanitary fire.

Where fresh-air inlets are carried from the house drain to the front of a house at the yard level, they could not be located near to the cold air supply, as there is a chance that during heavy states of the atmosphere a down draft may be created and the foul air sucked into the air box and thence upward into the house. Registers should NEVER BE PLACED AT THE FLOOR LEVEL, as they will collect dust and sweepings, which are liable to take fire.

Furnaces with heavy castings heat slowly and are less easily cracked or warped and they cool more slowly, so that the heat involved is more uniform. It is well to retain the air close to the fire pot and thus keep it longer in contact with the fire heating surface.

Water pans are often badly arranged so that they admit dust and as they are seldom cleaned they may become offensive. They should always be supplied with a ball cock so as to be automatic rather than by a stopcock which has to be opened by a servant who may be neglectful.

Attempts have been made to filter the air before entering the furnace but they usually fail. A screen of galvanized iron wire of 1-16 mesh will exclude most floating material from the air. The air supply is sometimes taken from the attic but it is apt to be dusty and impure. Others take it from vestibules of halls or piazzas which are not bad places.

Tennis is not a game that wanes in popularity. At Harvard there are forty courts on Holmes' field.

TRAPPED FOR HIS FUR.

Something About the Muskrat and How He Lives.

As no one class of fur is more in use than the muskrat (under more pretentious names), a few notes on the habits and manners of life of this animal may not be uninteresting. The muskrat, generally called muskrat, frequents all our streams and creeks, and, being an animal of great adaptability, is equally at home in the pond, creek, marsh or beaver meadow, varying its habits to meet the requirements of the locality in which he may be living. The muskrat is somewhat smaller and not unlike in shape the groundhog, being, however, much sleeker and minus the bushy tail. In color he is a grayish brown, ears small, set well back on the head, and serving him much better than his eyes. I have often allowed them to swim right within a few feet of me in full sight, when the breaking of a twig or a light splash would send them under, says a correspondent of the Toronto Globe. The feet are neatly and delicately formed, being webbed for swimming and armed with very serviceable claws for burrowing. The most peculiar feature, however, is the tail, which is of a shape and style quite his own. It is eight or nine inches in length, quite devoid of anything in the way of hair, saving a little short, stubby growth, and is quite flat, lying with the edges up and down in the water, and answers as rudder most admirably. When he is staying in a pond he likes to make some hollow floating log or empty stump his headquarters. If these are not just available, he will burrow in some clay part of the bank, at being the next easiest way of getting a house. If in a marsh or meadow he runs his burrow a few feet back from the creek, or some pool having connection with it, the rear of the burrow being above water level, often within a few inches of the surface of the ground, the entrance being under water. There are generally two or three approaches to the burrow, so that in case of danger he is suspected at one he has the choice of the others. They breed generally three times during the season, that is between early spring and fall, two or three being produced at a litter. As long as the young rats are unable to support themselves the parents are very assiduous in supplying their wants, but as soon as they are able to fend for themselves they are hustled out of the old home with scant ceremony, and as a rule with bodily violence on the part of the old couple. Their food consists of slugs, clams, fish, etc., and such soft roots as are found in their vicinity. Whether it is that the muskrat is a cannibal, or toothsome or more easily caught than any other fish I cannot say. As those of this fish are always found in greater numbers around their houses than those of any other fish. As cold weather comes on they prepare for it by selecting some hollow log or stump, or if these cannot be had they build a house on some very roughly thrown together, and in these places lay up a stock of food for winter. In marshes and meadows they select some little knoll in the water, put up their house among the grass, and lay in their stock. These houses are generally eighteen inches or two feet in height, and reflect very little credit on the muskrat as a builder. His architectural powers being a long way behind those of his clever cousin, the beaver. When the waters are closed with ice he takes to his house and is no more seen until the lengthening days of spring promise him an early release. At that time he may occasionally be seen sitting on the edge of some air-hole basking in the sun, or peering about for some possible morsel for his sharpening appetite. But it is not easy getting close to him, as he is quite shy after his long seclusion and is very suspicious at first. As soon as the waters are free of ice they make the utmost use of their liberty, and morning and evening can be seen in great numbers leaving, like small ships, a long wake in the still waters behind them. One very peculiar characteristic of this animal is that if he happens to be swimming about during the day he is very easily alarmed, but on coming out in the evening he becomes quite indifferent to danger, and will stand lots of stone throwing before being persuaded to abandon his course, or, whereas during the day the first stone sends him down in the most undignified alarm, Trappers begin to catch them in October and on until the streams close up, and again as soon as the river breaks up in the spring for a few weeks until the weather becomes too warm. The fur is most valuable in the early spring, but turns very rapidly after he comes out of his house. Some idea of the vast amount of muskrat fur used may be had when statistics show that there are more pelts of this one animal brought every year to market in this country, than of all other fur-bearing animals put together. As we hear very little of muskrat fur in a made up condition, the wonder is what becomes of it all. It is turned over to the furrier, and in his hands the best of it goes in for a low grade of otter and plucked beaver, and of the less valuable skins most of our cheap caps and lighter furs are made.

Frost Only Checks Yellow Jack. It is a mistake to suppose that a temperature of 32° Fahrenheit will destroy the germ believed to be responsible for yellow fever and thus effectually root out the terrible scourge. A frost will check the infection, but it does not destroy. Frost must have a powerful ally if the disease would be thoroughly stamped out, and that ally is cleanliness. A few years ago a vessel, infected with yellow fever, was almost dismantled and then anchored for a winter amid the snows and ice and intense cold of the Bay of Fundy. There through all the terrible frosts of half a year was the vessel suffered to remain. In the spring it was refitted, remanned and again made ready for service when again the terrible malady broke out among the crew, resulting in eight deaths. There must be a thorough cleaning up in Jacksonville, and a most thoroughly scientific course of disinfection pursued after the frosts of December, if the city would escape a repetition of the scenes which have plagued the whole State of Florida into the "Valley of the Shadow."

They Take Their Cats Along.

The big houses in London have lots of cats about them which grow fat while folks are in town and starve when they go out into the country. This has caused much distress to members of the Animal's Institute particularly, as even the Queen's cats were subjected to the same difficulty. But this year it was humbly and loyally pointed out to the Queen that her Windsor cats would starve while she was away, whereupon her Majesty was graciously pleased to order them all put in baskets and taken along to Osborne with the rest of the court, which was done. This has become fashionable. Society newspapers solemnly inform us that prettily decorated cat baskets may be in great demand, and the happy beasts may be seen by dozens at the railway stations going to the mountain or the seaside just like anybody else.—London Letter.

Consumption, Wasting Diseases, and General Debility. Doctors disagree as to the relative value of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites: the one supplying strength and flesh to the other giving nerve power, and setting as a tonic to the digestive and entire system. But in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites the two are combined, and the effect is wonderful. Thousands who have received no permanent benefit from other preparations have been cured by this. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable and is easily digested by those who can not tolerate plain Cod Liver Oil.

DEFEAT AT AL.

LESSON V, FOURTH QUARTER, IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 4.

Text of the Lesson, Josh. vii, 1-12—Commit Versus 10-12—Golden Text, Ps.

cxix, 36—Commentary by Rev. D. M.

Stearns.

(Condensed from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.)

The promises of God are generally conditioned upon obedience and separation from sin on our part. "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of his life," was the promise to Joshua (4, 5),

but the conditions were faith and obedience

on his part (6, 9).

1. "The children of Israel committed a trespass in the accused thing." The city and all in it had been accursed, or devoted to utter destruction (vi, 17), margin, compared with v. 21, where "utterly destroyed" is the same word, and see also I Sam. xv, 2, 3, 22,

xiv, 11, and the people had been forbidden to take for themselves anything of the accursed or devoted city. How fearful is the sin of disobedience, and how far reaching the effects of sin. One man sees, covets and takes that which he has been forbidden to touch (v. 22) and the result is that the whole nation suffers because of a broken law through his sin. In the Garden of Eden there was only one tree which Adam and Eve were forbidden to touch, but the tempter came, and Eve saw and coveted and took and did eat; and gave also unto her husband with her and he did eat; and to this day the result is manifest, and we carry

2. "At Bethel." These names carry us back some five hundred years to the time when Abram first entered the land and having pitched his tent between Bethel and Ai, he built an altar unto the Lord (Gen. xii, 8; xiii, 18). Having at the heap of ruins behind him, and Bethel (the house of God) before him, at Bethel, as Jacob left his home, fleeing from Esau, God appeared to him in a vision, and there he erected and anointed a pillar; and twenty years later, as he returned with his wives and children, God appeared to him again at the same place, calling his name Israel, and confirming to him the covenant,

3. "Let not all the people go up; for they are but few." Such was the advice of the men sent to view the country, but they had not the mind of God, for his command was to go up, and he said, "I will be with thee" (vii, 1).

It was wretched self confidence, forgetfulness of God, and making light of difficulties. It will not do to make too much nor too little of the enemy; we must not be anxious nor discouraged, neither should we be careless or boastful; but having on the one arm of God, we must ever be watchful, and especially when the occasion seems a little one. "Uzziah was marvelously helped til he was strong; but when he was strong his heart was lifted up to his destruction." (II

Ch. xxvii, 15, 16).

4. "They fled before the men of Ai."

This was not according to the promise that one should chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight (Deut. xxxii, 30), but the fault was in their own hearts, and they were unmindful of their Lord, and of the victory at Jericho, as if their arm had done it.

5. "The hearts of the people melted, and became as water." And yet it was not a very great defeat; they had only lost thirty-six men, and there was an army of over 600,000 ready for war. Why was this trembling of heart and this great and seemingly unrealized fear? It was all through failing to see the Lord and hear His voice. He sent a faintness into their hearts, and the voice of an angel of the Lord, and the voice of the Lord of the host, all this time! Had he made a mistake, or failed them, or been defeated? No, he was simply left out, and they had gone without him, and He had left them to do it.

Constipation

Demands prompt treatment. The results of neglect may be serious. Avoid all harsh and drastic purgatives, the tendency of which is to weaken the bowels. The best remedy is Ayer's Pills. Being purely vegetable, their action is prompt and their effect always beneficial. They are an admirable liver and after-dinner pill, and everywhere endorsed by the profession.

"Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice." Dr. L. E. Fowler, Bridge-

years, and have always found them

prompt and efficient in their action."—

L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y.

"I suffered from constipation which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared it would cause a stoppage of the bowels. Two boxes of Ayer's Pills ef-fectly completed the cure."—D. Burke,

Saco, Me.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past thirty years and consider them an invaluable family medicine. I know of no better remedy for liver troubles,

and have always found them a prompt cure for dyspepsia."—James Quinn, 50

"Having been troubled with constipation, which seems inevitable with persons of sedentary habits, I have tried

Ayer's Pills, hoping for relief. I am glad to say that they have proved to be better than any other medicine. I arrive at this conclusion only after a faithful trial of their merits." Samuel

S. GOVINDA ROW SATTAY is the name of a Hindoo Brahmin who is passing the summer at Saratoga. His description of India under English government is not creditable to the British. He says that the morals and habits of the people have become corrupt and that they indulge in excesses formerly unknown to them.

REFUTING the assertion that meat diet causes cancer, Surgeon Major Hendley reports from India that out of 102 operations for cancer performed at Jalore since 1880, forty-one were on the persons of meat eaters and sixty-one on those of strict vegetarians, who had not known the taste of meat from their births.

A SIMPLE plan of stopping bleeding of the nose has lately been advised. Grasp firmly the nose with the finger and thumb for ten or fifteen minutes; by this completely stopping the movement of air through the nose (which displaces freshly formed clots) you will favor the clotting of the blood, and will frequently stop hemorrhage.

THE present occupant of the Poc cottage at Fordham is Captain Michael Hart, of the Fordham fire department. The cottage is owned by John Cary, a New York merchant, who has a country seat near by. Mr. Cary does not object to renting the place, but he intends to keep it as a Poo left it, and will not even introduce gas or other modern improvements into it.

It will probably surprise most people to learn that both cessation of respiration and of movement of the heart are rejected as signs of death by a French lecturer, in considering the precise moment when life ceases. Heart beats have been known to continue for an hour after the body was beheaded, while on the other hand, they may temporarily cease in fainting.

A MONUMENT on a grand scale is about to be erected in Mountain View Cemetery, Oakland, Cal., by Dr. H. D. Cogswell, a gentleman of wide charity and great wealth, who has achieved popularity through his many benefactions, in memory of himself. The monument is to be seventy feet in height and will cost upward of seventy thousand dollars. The millionaire physician himself designed the beautiful and artistic work, as well as several drinking fountains presented by him to other cities.

It has long been thought an excellent thing to mix silver with the other metal when the bell was to be cast, and many pious persons have rejoiced at the thought that the silvery chime of the church bell was in part due to their gift. Now comes a writer in an English scientific paper with this paragraph: "I once asked a foreman in a well-known bell foundry whether putting silver in a melting pot was of advantage. He replied of great advantage—to the founder, as the silver sinks to the bottom; the founder pours off the copper and tin, and when the silver has cooled puts it in his pocket."

WATER is colder at the bottom than at the surface. In many bays on the coast of Norway the water often freezes at the bottom before it does above. Waves are very deceptive. To look at them in a storm one would think the water traveled. The water stays in the same place, but the motion goes on. Sometimes in storms these waves are forty feet high and travel fifty miles an hour, more than twice as fast as the swiftest steamer. The distance from valley to valley is generally fifteen times the height; hence a wave five feet high will extend over seventy-five feet of water. The force of the sea dashing on sea rock is said to be seventeen tons for each square yard.

WRECKED ON A BRIDGE.

A Northern Pacific Express Train Switched Into the River.

The Portland (West-bound) fast express on the Northern Pacific was wrecked at Crow Wing River. The train was running about forty miles an hour to make time near the east end of the bridge. The engine broke loose from the tender, and the tender, mail car, and two baggage cars went over the embankment into the river. The engine, with a fireman and fireman, crossed the bridge on the ties, but left them at the west end, and tumbling over and over, half buried itself in the embankment, killing the fireman, Alex. Brown, and severely injuring Engineer Stewart.

Clinton Mayne, a member of Company K, Third Regiment, who was riding on the front of the mail car, was so badly injured that he will probably never walk again.

In the mail-car were Railway Clerks C. M. Brown, J. A. Slattery, and O. R. Stevenson, and all escaped with bruises and lacerations in the river. The passengers were shaken up, but not injured, none of the other cars being derailed or on track. It is considered wonderful that the train did not go down the embankment into the river, in which case the loss of life would have been much greater. Fireman Brown lived at Jackson, Mich.

KILKENNY CATS AGAIN.

Revival of the Terry-Wagoner Feud in Northern Arkansas.

A St. Louis Dispatch says S. H. Gilmore, representing an Eastern wholesale firm, has just returned from the Kings River district in Northern Arkansas. He reports a fresh outbreak of the Terry-Wagoner feud in that section. Last January, John Terry and his brothers and two of the Wagoners, father and son, were killed. Recently Sam Meeks, a cousin of the Wagoners, went to Indian Territory, and during his absence, John and Miles Terry brought a charge of horse stealing against him, and secured a special appointment to the territory. Terry was captured and killed Meeks, reporting that he had attempted to escape. Tuesday night last the Wagoner faction retaliated by killing Miles Terry and fatally wounding John. Carl Garrett, of the Wagoner crowd, was killed, and Cyrus W. Davis seriously wounded during the fight.

WORTHLESS CHECKS.

How Hugh Magee Euthered the Citizens of Du Quoin, Ill., Out of Several Thousand Dollars.

Some eight or ten of the most prominent business men of Du Quoin, Ill., have just been euthered out of amounts ranging from $200 to $500 each, aggregating altogether $4,000 to $5,000 or more, by Hugh Magee, who for the past two years has been the manager of the Evaporator and Dry House Company in that place. Magee settled up all his accounts with Du Quoin, giving each of his creditors a check for the amount due, and the change or Du Quoin Banks and the Exchange Bank of Du Quoin, and the merchants are out many hundreds of dollars. Among the heaviest losers are the St. Nicholas Hotel, D. M. Quattro Hardware Company, Brooking's Drug House, James Bell, near Iron works, Slickman's Shoe House, and Mifflin's restaurant. The establishment he had charge of was established here July 18, 1887, by C. E. Prescott & Co., of Chicago, the company being young Magee's.

The business will probably be continued by the creditors. The plant is the largest one in the West. Magee is a young man and was universally popular here.

any importance in the country has one time and another, been visited by some notable people, and there is few in the business who can tell amusing stories about the whiteness of greatness when it sits for a picture. Politicians and members of the legislature are not, as a general thing, ha-

"And where are you going?"

"To my sister's. My husband is and I have no home."

"Have you any money?"

"None at all, sir."

"Umph! Sorry for you. Let me see this."

The Hog has been robbed of his bristles. The woman's tears have made his selfishness melt. He returned to his gathered the other Hogs about him said:

"Come down! Poor widow—sick—no home. Come down."

The Hogs went to their work and in ten minutes the sum of $40 was put into the woman's hand, and the Hog observed:

"There—there—it's all right—I won't show you back here."

The woman followed him into the coach a dozen Hogs rose up and insisted that she take their seats, and all gathered round her to voice the sentiment:

"Poor woman! What a thing we can do for you!"

If a man live seventy years, his biography is a scroll of years. If a scroll had been laid out before him during the first ten years of his life, to look into the twenties, nor into the thirties, nor the forties, nor the fifties, nor the sixties, nor the seventies, nor the eighties, nor the nineties, nor the hundreds, he would have got the habit of raring along like a gallop, and he would have got the seals of the future are broken. I would not give two cents to know how long I am going to live, or in what day of the year I am going to die. I would rather give $1,000 not to know. Suppose some one could break the next seal in the scroll of your personal life, and tell you that you were going to die July 30th, you were going to die the summer after the next—how much would you be good for between this and that? It would be no more than a few days. You would be counting the months and days and your family and friends would count them, and next 4th of July you would be dead. You would say, "O Lord, one year from today I am to go. Dear Lord, I wish no one had told me so long before, wish that necromancer had not broken the seal of my future. And O God, send me a partaker you would say; 'I hope you will keep your free for an engagement the of July, 1890. That day you will be needed at my funeral.'"

"I will take my measure now—5 feet 11 inches. I am glad that Christ dropped a thick veil over the hour of our demise and the hour of our resurrection. I am glad that God hid that day and hour knoweth no man; no the angels, but my father only." Keep your hands off the seven seals.

"I will take the seventh of seven of the bit vises the seven thunders. What those thunders meant we are not told, but they are many instances of the despotism which husbands exercised over their wives. The slightest indiscretion was sometimes punished by death, while men inquired of what their liked with that leniency. "If you were to catch your wife," was the law laid down by Cato the Censor, "in an act of infidelity you would kill her with impunity without trial; but if she were to catch you she would not venture to touch you with her finger, lest she should be righted." Wives were prohibited from tasting wine at the risk of the severest penalties. The conduct of Egnatius was praised, who, surprising his wife in the act of sipping the forbidden liquor, beat her to death. The same sternness appears in the reason why the inducement of the Romans to dismiss their wives, Sulpicius Gallus dismissed because she appeared on the streets without a veil. Antistius Vetus dismissed his because he saw her speaking secretly with a freedwoman in public, and Senecottius Sulpicius sent his away because she had ventured to go into the public games without informing him of her movements.

Little girl—Mamma, I want you to make a favor.

Mother—What is it, Fanny?

Little girl—I want you to make me present of a nice new baby brother, I want papa to know anything about it, till he sees it.
